電力服務中斷 TREASURE ISLAND

日期與時間：

受影響物業：

規劃的服務中斷時間與日期視天氣情況而定，且可能發生變更。

如果您是在受影響區域出租房屋的房東，並且San Francisco公用事業委員會 (San Francisco Public Utilities Commission, SFPUC) 的帳單是發送到您的名下，則您需負責將此服務中斷規劃告訴您的租戶。

以下是您可以採取的準備工作：
提前為手機和其他電子設備充電。
關好冰箱，以防食物變質。
拔掉敏感電子設備的插頭，例如電視和電腦。

在停電期間，請勿將您的物業或設備連接至備用發電機，否則會對您的建築物和附近工作的電力工人造成潛在危險。

TIDA IN THE NEWS

JUNE 2025

Summary

- News coverage about the island was neutral this month, the majority of articles that mentioned the island were not directly about current or past development projects.
- Highlights: Real estate/business news outlets picked up the press release about 490 Ave of The Palms nearing completion.
- Lowlights: Two incidents involving police action on treasure island were picked up by local news agencies. Job Corp campus closure remains in limbo with students and staff speaking with local reporters about their concerns around the potential end of the Job Corp program.

TRD exclusive: Sneak peek at Treasure Island's first new condo project

The Real Deal, June 16th 2025

The first phase of the decades-long Treasure Island redevelopment will finally come to an end this fall, with the launch of sales for its first condominium project at 490 Avenue of the Palms, according to information shared exclusively with The Real Deal by Treasure Island Development Group, a partnership between Wilson Meany, Stockbridge Capital Group and Lennar.

The six-story mid-rise building will have 148 waterfront condos that sit along the master planned community's new Cityside Park, which Wilson Meany's managing partner, Chris Meany, said would be the island's "version of a Crissy Field-like waterfront park experience" and is also set to open this fall.

In addition to the direct access to open space, the luxury building has protected waterfront views, creating a “front-row relationship to the Bay and skyline that simply doesn’t exist elsewhere in San Francisco,” Meany said.

Designed in an architectural collaboration with Anne Fougeron and Mark Cavagnero Associates, the condo community is centered around three multistory “portals” that create dramatic view corridors to the Bay and city skyline, according to the developer. Each portal ranges from two to three stories in height. In addition to accentuating views, they also serve as passive lightwells, which will bring daylight and natural ventilation into the center of the building, where there is a landscaped courtyard that opens to both residential terraces and a shared outdoor kitchen and dining area....

ISLAND RESIDENTS

S.F. drug users often reject treatment. They say relationships can open the door to recovery

Mission Local, June 4th 2025

The wind battering Treasure Island in early May was strong enough to blow a ladybug off the sidewalk.

“Watch out, little guy,” Indigo warned. He took his next steps with a delicacy unexpected from a man wearing thick trekking shoes and distressed cargo pants.

On the southwest side of the mile-long island, Indigo walked along a rock buffer separating the road from the sea. Looking out at downtown San Francisco, he described how he saw it when he first arrived 30-some years ago: A “snowglobe city,” quaint and pristine.

Indigo’s view of the city became murky in the intervening decades, tainted by drug use and homelessness. For years, he lived as a “functioning addict” instead of pursuing treatment. It’s a choice many drug users make.

“It took a long time for the stars to come into alignment,” he said. Until 2023, to be exact.

That’s when a pharmacist started coming by Indigo’s single-room-occupancy hotel. Now, Indigo is in the final stage of an outpatient substance-use treatment program on Treasure Island. To protect his privacy and separate himself from his troubled past, he uses a nickname. Indigo is a rich blue-violet color associated with the inner clarity chakra, a shade much darker than his gentle baby-blue eyes.

It’s difficult for people in recovery to point to one reason for their decision to finally enter treatment. But many, like Indigo, noted the importance of the people who met them where they were at, physically and emotionally.

Door-to-door

Two years ago, Indigo was living in an SRO in Lower Nob Hill, “unable to get anything done” besides “smoking crack” and using fentanyl. Then he met Damian Peterson.

Peterson, a psychiatric clinical pharmacist at the San Francisco Department of Public Health, travels to low-income housing units to deliver buprenorphine, a medication used to treat opioid-use disorder.

“If they want to start medication, I’m available,” the pharmacist said. “But some people aren’t ready yet.”

Peterson works with these patients, too. He helps such drug users identify what kind of support they do want, and what barriers stand in the way.

Many healthcare workers said that simply getting to know someone, their relationship to drugs, and their goals can be the best step toward deeper conversations about treatment options....

2 missing children last seen on Treasure Island found safe, SFPD says

ABC 7 News, June 21st 2025

Two children who were reported missing in San Francisco on Friday were safely found on Saturday, according to the San Francisco Police Department.

The police department had issued a public appeal for help finding 10-year-old Leonardo Henderson and 14-year-old Deandre Jones, Jr., after they had not been seen since late Thursday night.

The two were believed to be on Treasure Island, headed for the city via bus. At least one of them was considered at-risk, police said.

Police said Saturday the two were reunited with family and thanked the public for their assistance.

US Marshals arrest Vallejo homeless encampment shooting suspect on Treasure Island

Vallejo Sun, June 6th 2025

A Vallejo man suspected of fatally shooting two people and critically injuring a third at an encampment remains in custody, following his arrest June 4 on Treasure Island by agents with the U.S. Marshals Service .

Residents of the encampment said the suspect, identified as Eddie Charles Sample, had threatened people there with a shotgun before the shooting.

Vallejo police detectives obtained a warrant to arrest Sample and requested assistance from the U.S. Marshals to locate him in connection with the shooting May 26 at the encampment near Daniels Avenue and Sacramento Street, according to a press release from the Vallejo Police Department.

Sample was booked into the Solano County Jail on charges including murder, parole violation and evading police. He is being held without bail, according to Vallejo police spokesperson Rashad Hollis....

Hundreds Of Students Displaced From Treasure Island Job Corps Housing

SF GATE, June 6th 2025

Last week, 375 of 390 students enrolled in a federally funded Job Corps program were living on a job training campus at San Francisco's Treasure Island. By Thursday, just 100 students remained after being suddenly informed the school would be closing.

The Treasure Island Job Corps Center is part of a national program established in 1964 to support low-income youth with housing, education, and job training. On May 29, the U.S. Department of Labor announced a phased pause of operations at all Job Corps centers by June 30, citing severe financial and safety concerns.

A temporary restraining order issued by U.S. District Judge Andrew Carter Jr. in New York paused the shutdowns until a June 17 hearing.

"A lot of these folks come from broken homes or places where they're in danger," said Matthew Hardy, spokesperson for the California Federation of Teachers, which works with the students who range in age from 16 to 24. "They live very, very precarious lives. One of the students is going to a friend's couch. That's his housing plan."

A Thursday rally drew students, educators, and union leaders who described the closure as an "act of injustice." Student leaders recounted how Job Corps offered stability and direction after homelessness or hardship. Staff also decried the sudden job losses and urged President Donald Trump's administration to reconsider....

Court hearing could decide fate of Treasure Island Job Corps

SF Examiner, June 16th 2025

Hundreds of local teenagers and young adults will closely watch a federal court hearing Tuesday that could decide the fate of a career-training and education program.

U.S. Department of Labor Secretary Lori Chavez-DeRemer has been ordered to appear in front of Judge Andrew Carter in the Eastern District of New York on Tuesday for a hearing on the federal government's attempts to suspend the Job Corps, a program for 16-to-24-year-olds from economically disadvantaged backgrounds.

The Treasure Island Job Corps has some 350 students participating, as well as contracted staff maintaining the program, according to the president of the union representing its teachers and support staff.

"In my wildest dreams, I wouldn't have ever imagined that something so good for the community could be cut," said Colleen Jeffers, the president of American Federation of Teachers Local 6319.

The Department of Labor created the program in 1964, with the Treasure Island outpost opening in 1999. There are 120 Job Corps centers around the country.

Enrollees are given resources to finish their high-school educations (if need be), a place to live on campus, health care and job training in fields that range from cooking to construction. When students complete their educations, they're provided guidance on finding employment and housing, as well as the next steps in their lives.

"Quite a bit of them are being affected by stopping their program and pushing them out," Jeffers said. "That's not fair to them. That's not what they came there for."

The Department of Labor announced May 29 that it would pause operations at all contractor-operated Job Corps centers by June 30. An analysis found that Job Corps was "no longer achieving the intended outcomes that students deserve" due to reports of serious incidents and fiscal issues, labor officials said. The program operated at a $140 million deficit last year, and that funding gap is projected to increase to $213 million this year.

Officials said they would work with state and local partners to help students continue their educations and job training. But according to program participants The Examiner spoke with, they were told they had to leave the day after hearing the news. Those who were close to finishing their training or were unhoused were given a week....

The Delta Queen steamboat, a historic landmark, is up for sale after years of attempted repairs

New Orleans Metro News, June 25th 2025

After years of trying to repair the 1920s-era steamboat to her former glory, the owners of the Delta Queen, a National Historic Landmark, are putting the vessel up for sale.

Delta Queen Steamboat Co. announced in a social media post that after exhausting all of its options attempting to transform the legendary boat into an overnight passenger ship, it is hoping to find someone else to complete the restoration.

"It remains DQSC's goal and mission to see the DELTA QUEEN preserved and the best solution is one that opens the vessel to the public to generate the revenues necessary to sustain its maintenance and long-term preservation. Whether this means as a cruising vessel, or in the manner her identical twin, the DELTA KING has enjoyed as a stationary attraction; the DELTA QUEEN needs to be saved," the post read.

The Delta Queen and her twin, the Delta King, were built in 1927 as luxurious passenger steamboats that doubled as shipping vessels. They operated in California for years, commuting between San Francisco and Sacramento each night.

When World War II commenced, the U.S. Navy commissioned the Delta Queen to ferry troops in the San Francisco Bay. It then was purchased by Captain Tom Greene and returned to its former job carrying paying passengers up and down the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, stopping at more than 80 ports....

In 1940, Naval Reservists report for duty to the Delta Queen steamboat. The old steam wheeler was used by the Navy as a training and barrack facility at Yerba Buena Island and Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay between 1940 and 1946.
