Commissioners Streamlining Task Force,

The Commission Streamlining Task Force's recommendation to downgrade the Commission on the Environment to advisory status - and after 3 years to eliminate it altogether - is damaging to San Francisco's reputation as a climate leader, to say nothing of the actual health and safety of City residents.

The Commission on the Environment promotes environmental justice by directing funding and programs to communities most impacted by pollution and climate change; it strengthens workforce development by investing in youth climate internships and green jobs; it provides residents a formal platform to speak out and influence policy. These are just some of its functions.

Now more than ever, the world needs climate leadership from local governments - not heads in the sand. Drastic cuts to the SF Environment Department in the recent 2-year budget revealed an ominous willingness to ignore action to prevent the ever-increasing severity of climate disasters. Gutting and cutting the Department's oversight body only reinforces this impression. It will not streamline government - it will make it harder for the City to keep its focus on eliminating the cause of global warming. Other departments are each much more focused on their primary mission; it is SFE alone, directed by the Commission, whose mission is to reduce emissions citywide and protect our climate.

Proven Impact and Need for Retained Authority — The Commission has driven innovations in areas like waste management, building electrification, environmental justice, and climate leadership. Recent actions (e.g., a unanimous vote to urge retention of governance status) emphasize that downgrading it could undermine transparency, accountability, adequate Department funding, and effective climate plan implementation. As advocates we argue it serves as a public steward with networks and expertise essential for San Francisco's environmental goals.
