Retired San Francisco Police Department Deputy Chief Ann Mannix
And her daughter Katherine "Katie" Mannix
San Francisco Police Department, California
End of Watch: Sunday, October 11, 2026

A retired San Francisco Police Department deputy chief and her 24-year-old daughter have passed away following a tragic incident on Sunday, October 11, 2026.

Deputy Chief Ann Mannix was a historic trailblazer in San Francisco law enforcement, dedicating 34 years of honorable service to the City and County of San Francisco. She broke monumental barriers as the first woman to both join and lead the department's SWAT and Special Operations teams. After rising through the ranks as a lieutenant, captain, and commander, she retired in 2021 as one of the highest-ranking women in SFPD history. Beyond her tactical leadership, she served on the board of the San Francisco Police Activities League (SFPAL), passionately mentoring local youth and building bridges across diverse communities.

Her daughter, Katherine "Katie" Mannix, shared her mother’s deep spirit of community care. She was a dedicated 24-year-old nursing student working toward a career as an ICU nurse.

The passing of both Ann and Katie has left a profound void across the city. Their dedication to the community, pioneering spirit, and legacy of service will never be forgotten by the police department, the first responder community, and a grateful city.

The Sheriff's Department Oversight Board extends its deepest condolences to the Mannix family and their loved ones.
