For example, the current system still requires the city to employ a bookbinder and to publish laws in daily print editions of the Chronicle that no longer exist. 	OR LURIE & SUPERMAJORITY OF SUPERVISORS SAY YES ON PROP A TO CLEAN UP OUR OUTDATED CHARTER. About every 30 years, City Hall sets aside its differences to clean up old, broken, and conflicting parts of our city's governing document called the city charter. Department heads, commissions, and the public suggest changes through a transparent, months-long process. The mayor and a supermajority of the Board of Supervisors agreed on 110 small fixes that will help city government serve you better. The fixes fall into four categories: OUTDATED TECHNOLOGY New technology can make old laws pointless. For example, the current system still requires the city to employ a bookbinder and to publish laws in daily print editions of the Chronicle that no longer exist. WASTEFUL DUPLICATION Sometimes two city departments are required to do the exact same job. For example, multiple departments being required to create the same report, forcing employees into busy work that wastes time and money. ZOMBIE COMMISSIONS Our bureaucracy has 60 advisory bodies and commissions that can't be updated without a vote at the ballot. After decades the charter can end up with zombie commissions that serve no purpose. For example, the Sanitation and Streets Commission oversees a department that doesn't exist, and the charter still references a Parking Authority that voters removed a decade ago. CONFUSING OR BADLY WORDED LAWS Lawmakers sometimes make typos and mistakes when writing legislation, leaving behind laws that are confusing or just don't make sense. Prop A cleans up some of the worst examples.
