        i. Presenter: Patricia Barraza, Director of Community Activations & Partnerships, Livable City

Patricia Barraza presented on the DCYF Family Summits, and asked for the support of the Youth Commission in engaging young people to participate in these family summits. Patricia distributed the posters to each of the Youth Commissioners, and explained that these Family Summits are going to be used to determine how funding is spent in future years. Kimberly Wicoff, who is the Director of the Our Children Our Families Initiative (OCOFI), and she discussed the priorities of these family summits and how $400 million will be spent in the coming years. Vice Chair Segall asked what they think the biggest takeaways are of the summits they've hosted already, to which Wicoff said from the 10 summits they've hosted so far, they've heard a lot about public safety, easier routes to schools, nutrition, and other topics. Commissioner Martinovsky asked how many families fill out the survey, how often are they doing the survey and community work, and what's something that the City has done to take action as a result of this work. Wicoff said that this is the first time they've done this outreach in this way, and said that it would take a year to compile all of the data, a year to distribute information, and additional time to put this feedback into a single plan. Wicoff said that families who participate in surveys tend to be higher-income, so they're working to send mail to all families, and that the survey will be open until December. Martinovsky said he was the youngest person in the room when he went to the District 7 Family Summit and asked if there will be events focused on direct feedback from students themselves, to which Barraza said that youth attendance to all of the family summits is encouraged and that the Youth Commission can help with outreach to their communities. Officer Sarceno Bravo asked if there are other gaps in demographic outreach that could be uplifted and how SFUSD is partnered with community outreach, to which Wicoff said that SFUSD is helping to push out the survey now to get as many people to respond. Wicoff said that they're focusing on democratizing data to ensure that each school that participates and gets a strong number of responses is able to have their own data back to know the results. Wicoff said that the current responses have skewed heavily towards higher-income, white, and API participants. Vice Chair Segall asked how many responses they've received and what their end goal is, to which Wicoff said they have 1300 responses, but they're looking for a representative sample. Officer Shulman asked if there's been events at public libraries for those who struggle with digital access, to which Wicoff said that they just met with the library and that they're supporting the distribution of the survey across all of their branches' open houses.

Chair Mordehai said the Youth Commission will commit to encouraging youth turnout to these summits.

b. Request for support of the mission of Fremont Youth Vote's efforts to lower the voting age to 16 for local school board elections in California
    i. Saharsh Maram, Fremont Youth Vote

Commissioner Marlow asked if there's any specific asks, to which Maram said signing onto the letter would be helpful, spreading awareness to the public by building connections. Officer Biagtan asked if there's any graphics that the Youth Commission could post on their social media, to which Maram said yes they can send a lot of materials for us to post. Chair Mordehai asked if Assemblymembers Stefani or Haney have signed on, to which Maram said he doesn't believe they've signed them yet. Chair Mordehai asked if it would be helpful to write a letter to San Francisco's State Legislators to encourage them to sign-on, to which Maram said yes it would be very helpful.
